Birinyi Stock Ratings - Explanation

The Birinyi Stock Ratings system is designed to be used as a tool for both finding new stocks and researching familiar ones. The system covers 1,500 stocks which are measured on two basic criteria covering the fundamental and technical characteristics of each stock.

Each stock is a candidate for the "Birinyi 50," although money flows and overbought and oversold conditions are also taken into account. The 1,500 stocks are sorted based on a proprietary total score, and the top fifty names are published in that order for the "Birinyi 50" list.

Technical Score: Birinyi's "Technical Score" is based on a stock's trading pattern and trajectory. A stock receiving a high technical score is in a strong uptrend and can be bought when it is at an oversold level.

A stock receiving a low technical score is in a strong downtrend and can be sold (or shorted) when it is overbought.

Fundamental Score: For both the current quarter and current fiscal year, a stock receives a higher score for YoY growth and a positive estimate revision. Stocks with the highest fundamental scores are expected post increased earnings per share during the quarter and the year, and the estimate has been raised within the last three months.

Explanation of Items

Ticker	Ticker symbol for individual stock
Company	Company's name
Group	GICS industry group classification (also used by Standard & Poor's)
Index	Market capitalization index (Large Cap, Mid Cap, or Small Cap)
Price	Most recent closing price

Trading Parameters

Normal Range	The bottom and top of a stock's trading range. Between these prices a stock is "neutral." Above the top range a stock is overbought, below the bottom range a stock is oversold.
Extreme Low	This is the most oversold the stock has been in the last 18 months. By no means a limit, if a stock declines below this price before the next update then it will have a new extreme low. Highlighted in green within 2%.
Extreme High	This is the most overbought the stock has been in the last 18 months. By no means a limit, if a stock rallies above this price before the next update then it will have a new extreme high. Highlighted red within 2%.
